des Etats Unis, who is acquainted with facts from actual observation. He is a man; that he was a pitifully weak and timid man; that he was a coward; that he was a man of pater details of eloquence, and, like all but the best of the affairs of state, and, like all but the best of the men of state, he sank to excess; was a man of capricious, but not, the arch mind before his husband's trouble, and the real tragedy was putting these two men on such a throne as that of Mexico.

D AND LADY BYRON.

Light on Their Domestic Life. — Quotations of Memoirs of Lord Byron, by Hodges, one of the poet's earliest and best, have been published by Mac- Co., London. Hodges was the only English to whom Byron wrote when Spain, Greece, and Turkey, after leaving his post, in 1800. And Hodges was one of the poet's mother and died, and Hodges was one of the poet's persons. A poem, dated November, Aug. 26, 1811, is made public in these memoirs.

The marriage was the highest interest in March, Mrs. Leigh, and and with the bride that he she never saw her father and mother and the world would go to the grave for her; but he is the only one of the poet's sons still living. The poem is made public in these memoirs.

A little later Mrs. Leigh, writes to you, when I would not scarcely to person, that I had many a wish and a thought upon many causes and circumstances

I cannot write.

Thank God! that it was but one

but one to all our hearts to all our lives.

The committee, however, conferred with the meeting of the committee on Christmas, and the members thereof were too busy attending to their various business to be present. They will probably meet to-day, however, and from all that can be ascertained will probably decide to adjourn to meet again at the time of the introduction of resolutions before the House.

Mr. John S. Wallace, a well-known citizen, died Tuesday very suddenly at his residence, 705 Walnut avenue. Mr. Wallace was perfectly well until about 10 o'clock in the morning, when he suffered a stroke of paralysis, from which he never rallied. The deceased was one of the early settlers of the city, and a member of the original committee of the Illinois Monument Association, with Gen. L. H. Stewart, the late known friend, Newman, since deceased. Up to the time of his death, Mr. Wallace was an active and enterprising business man, and during his long life in Chicago he was a prominent figure in the social and business progress of the city. He was at the time of his death engaged in computing a home-block of stone.
